DISPOSITION: [1]

Affirmed.

CASE SUMMARY:

PROCEDURAL POSTURE: Plaintiff insureds sought review of a judgment of the Circuit Court (Michigan), which granted defendant insurance companies' motions for summary judgment because the insureds had not suffered any pecuniary injuries. The insureds were also denied their request that their action be certified as a class action.

OVERVIEW: The insureds were involved in claims where their insurance companies had paid a portion of their medical bills, but denied payment of the balance as being unreasonable charges. The insureds sought declaratory relief and an injunction ordering the insurance companies to pay the full amount of their medical bills, and to certify their suit as a class action. The insureds contended that the insurance companies' failure to pay their full medical bills could result in health care providers bringing legal action against them for the balance of their bills. The court disagreed, and affirmed the judgment of the trial court. The court held that a review of the record revealed no evidence that the insureds had suffered injury as a result of the insurance companies' partial payment of their medical bills, nor was any injury threatened. The court stated that where no case or actual controversy existed, the trial court lacked subject matter jurisdiction to enter a declaratory judgment, and properly granted the insurance companies' motions for summary disposition. Further, because the action was dismissed, the insureds' request for certification of the suit as a class action was properly denied.

OUTCOME: The court affirmed the judgment of the trial court that granted summary disposition to the insurance companies in the insureds' action for complete payment of their medical bills to medical providers. The court held that the action was properly dismissed because the insureds had suffered no actual damages.

OPINION: [*404] [13] TAYLOR, J.

Plaintiffs appeal a circuit court order granting defendants' motions for summary disposition on the basis that plaintiffs had suffered no pecuniary injuries. Plaintiffs also appeal the court's denial of class certification. We affirm.

Plaintiffs are insureds under their respective policies of automobile no-fault insurance with the defendant [2] automobile insurance carriers. As a result of separate automobile accidents, plaintiffs incurred hospitalization and medical treatment expenses. Plaintiffs' expenses were clearly of the type to be paid by their carriers. Defendants acknowledged their duty to pay but declined to pay the billed amounts, asserting the amounts billed were unreasonable. Defendants paid to plaintiffs' health care providers amounts that they considered reasonable. Plaintiffs, claiming to be a class, assert that they are at risk of being sued by their health care providers for the balance of their bills as a result of defendants' failure to pay the full amounts billed. However, the health care providers have not sued plaintiffs for the outstanding balance on their bills. Furthermore, defendants have repeatedly made assurances, both in their pleadings and in open court, that they will defend and indemnify plaintiffs if the providers sue, and that they will attempt to protect plaintiffs from bad credit ratings in the event the health care providers pursue collection directly from plaintiffs.

Plaintiffs argued below that defendants wrongfully utilized the worker's compensation payment [*405] schedules to determine [3] a reasonable payment. They sought declaratory relief and an injunction precluding defendants from using the worker's compensation payment schedules to establish reasonable medical expenses and requested that the court order defendants to pay the amounts billed.

Plaintiffs' argument that defendants are required to pay the full amount of medical expenses billed is contrary to Michigan law. [HN1] Section 3107 of the no-fault insurance act, MCL 500.3107; MSA 24.13107, states in pertinent part:

(1) Except as provided in subsection (2), personal protection insurance benefits are payable for the following:

(a) Allowable expenses consisting of all reasonable charges incurred for reasonably necessary products, services and accommodations for an injured person's care, recovery, or rehabilitation.

[HN2] According to the plain and unambiguous language of § 3107, an insurer is liable only for those medical expenses that constitute a reasonable charge for a particular product or service. Nasser v Auto Club Ins Ass'n, 435 Mich. 33, 49; 457 N.W.2d 637 (1990). Unlike the situation in Nasser where the insurance carrier refused to pay any medical [4] expenses [14] whatsoever, in this case defendants have paid those parts of plaintiffs' bills they found to be reasonable.

Also, [HN3] medical care providers are prohibited by law from charging more than a reasonable fee.

A physician, hospital, clinic or other person or institution lawfully rendering treatment to an injured person for an accidental bodily injury covered by personal protection insurance, and a person or institution providing rehabilitative occupational training following the injury, may charge [*406] a reasonable amount for the products, services and accommodations rendered. The charge

207 Mich. App. 402, *406; 526 N.W.2d 12, 14;
1994 Mich. App. LEXIS 447, 4

shall not exceed the amount the person or institution customarily charges for like products, services and accommodations in cases not involving insurance. [MCL 500.3157; MSA 24.13157.]

When read in harmony, §§ 3107 and 3157 clearly indicate that an insurance carrier need pay no more than a reasonable charge and that a health care provider can charge no more than that. In theory, the insureds could be sued for the difference between what the carrier will pay and what the provider demands, but it is unlikely that the insureds would be liable for those expenses. As the Supreme Court noted in Nasser: [5]

We question, in any event, the Court of Appeals' apparent conclusion that if the insurer is not made liable for even unreasonable and unnecessary expenses it will inevitably fall to plaintiff to pay those expenses. To the extent that plaintiff has any liability for these expenses in the event his insurance does not pay, it is presumably contractual. It seems unlikely that plaintiff would have an express agreement with [the doctor] or the hospital to pay unreasonable and unnecessary medical expenses, and equally as unlikely that he would have an implied contractual duty to do so. See 61 Am Jur 2d, Physicians, Surgeons, and Other Healers, § 158, pp 290–291. And, while we need not resolve the issue in this case, it seems unlikely that medical expenses found to be unreasonable or unnecessary in a no-fault action would be found recoverable in a contract action against plaintiff. [Nasser at 55–56, n 10.]

Furthermore, defendants have expressly stated that they will defend and indemnify plaintiffs in the event that plaintiffs are sued by their providers for the outstanding balance. Indeed they are directed to do so by a recent Interpretive Statement [*407] issued by the Commissioner of Insurance. [6] n1 It requires that no-fault insurers provide insureds and claimants with complete protection from economic loss for benefits provided under personal protection insurance. Auto insurers must act at all times to assure that the insured or claimant is not exposed to harassment, dunning, disparagement of credit, or lawsuit as a result of a dispute between the health care provider and the insurer. [Michigan Department of

Commerce, Insurance Bureau Bulletin 92–03, October 23, 1992.]

Accordingly, plaintiffs are protected, by both the defendants' promise and the directive of the Commissioner of Insurance, from incurring damages as a result of defendants' payment of less than the full amount billed by plaintiffs' health care providers.

n1 While the Commissioner of Insurance's Interpretive Statement, Bulletin 92–03, does not have the full force or effect of law, MCL 24.203(6); MSA 3.560(103)(6), we generally give deference to administrative agency interpretations. DAIE v Comm'r of Ins, 119 Mich. App. 113, 119; 326 N.W.2d 444 (1982).

Our review of the record reveals no evidence that plaintiffs have suffered injury as a result of defendants' partial payment of their medical bills; nor is any injury threatened. [HN4] Where no case or actual controversy exists, the circuit court lacks subject-matter jurisdiction to enter a declaratory judgment. Shavers v Attorney General, 402 Mich. 554, 588; 267 N.W.2d 72 (1978). A case or actual controversy does not exist where the injuries sought to be prevented are merely hypothetical; there must be an actual injury or loss. Id. Therefore, we hold that the trial court properly granted defendants' motions for summary disposition.

It is to be recalled that the public policy of this state is that "the existence of [*15] no-fault insurance [*408] shall not increase the cost of health care." Dean v Auto Club Ins Ass'n, 139 Mich. App. 266, 274; 362 N.W.2d 247 (1984). Indeed, "the no-fault act was as concerned with the rising cost of health care as it was with providing an efficient system of automobile insurance." Id. at 273. To that end, the plain and ordinary [8] language of § 3107 requiring no-fault insurance carriers to pay no more than reasonable medical expenses, clearly evinces the Legislature's intent to "place a check on health care providers who have 'no incentive to keep the doctor bill at a minimum.'" Dean, supra at 273.

For the above reasons, we reject plaintiffs' argument that, pursuant to the no-fault act, defendants are obligated to pay the entire amount of plaintiffs' medical bills. Such an interpretation would require insurance companies to accept health care providers' unilateral decisions regarding what constitutes reasonable medical expenses, effectively eliminating insurance companies' cost-policing function as contemplated by the no-fault act. This result would directly conflict with the Legislature's purpose in enacting the no-fault system in general and § 3107 in particular. "It is clear that the Legislature did not intend for no-fault insurers to pay all claims submitted without reviewing the claims for lack of coverage, excessiveness, or fraud." Lewis v Aetna Casualty & Surety Co, 109 Mich. App. 136, 139; 311 N.W.2d 317 (1981). [9]

207 Mich. App. 402, *408; 526 N.W.2d 12, 15;
1994 Mich. App. LEXIS 447, 8

Finally, the trial court did not err in refusing to certify plaintiffs' class. Because plaintiffs cannot maintain their individual causes of action, they are unqualified to represent the purported class. Tucich v Dearborn Indoor Racquet Club, 107 Mich. App. 398, 407; 309 N.W.2d 615 (1981).

Given our disposition of the legal issue presented with regard to the payment of medical [*409] expenses, we do not address the issue whether worker's compensation payment schedules are the proper standard for determining reasonable charges.
