- Matthew advises oil and gas clients on the tax structuring of upstream and midstream transactions, including acquisitions, divestitures, and joint ventures involving partnership and LLC structures, purchase price and tax basis allocation, and production-based transaction economics.
- Advising professional services firms and investors on alternative practice structures, and succession-driven transactions.

He also provides ongoing business and tax planning support for both public and closely held companies in connection with complex operations and strategic initiatives.

Prior to joining Bodman, Matthew practiced as a senior associate in the Chicago office of a global accounting firm, where he advised large corporate clients and private equity sponsors as a transactional tax advisor. He worked on transactions ranging in size from approximately $25 million to $24 billion across industries including healthcare, defense, software-as-a-service, and manufacturing, among others.

Matthew received his legal training in Chicago, where he served as a summer extern with the City of Chicago Law Department and worked as a law clerk with business law firms. During law school, he served as President of the DePaul University College of Law Student Bar Association.
