Jill M. Miller maintains a national practice advising clients in the electronic payments processing industry on contractual and regulatory matters with a particular focus on privacy and cybersecurity laws. She is the chair of Bodman's Data Privacy and Security Practice Group.

Her clients include independent sales organizations, merchant-acquiring businesses, major credit card brands, software and hardware providers, payment gateways, and financial institutions. She counsels these clients on compliance with a broad range of international, federal and state regulations including GDPR, TILA, Regulation Z, consumer disclosure laws, licensed lender laws, unclaimed property laws, and many other laws affecting the payments industry.

She also advises clients on compliance with state and federal personal data protection laws and prepares policies and procedures related to customer privacy and data breach protection, detection, and notification. She works with clients to develop data breach response plans and
