

Bodman PLC recently hosted “We Dont Want Them: Race and Housing in Metropolitan Detroit, 1900-1968 & Beyond,” a traveling exhibit developed by the Michigan Roundtable for Diversity and Inclusion. The exhibit, which was on display in Bodman’s Detroit office conference center at Ford Field for two weeks in April, explores racial equity in Metro Detroit and the historic disparities in housing opportunities available to minorities due to social pressures and legally sanctioned racial separation. Bodman is a long time supporter of the Michigan Roundtable and firm Member Robert J. Diehl, Jr. (photo above at far right) serves as Chair of the Board of Directors of the organization. Pictured with Diehl (from left) are Bodman Chairman Ralph E. McDowell and firm Members Damali A. Sahu and Jaimee L. Witten. Sahu and Witten co-chair Bodman’s Diversity and Social Action Committee, which coordinated the exhibit.

